Hey! This could work!

I secretly like to plunge, so together, we could have some really good job security.

You're cracking me up! I thought that charm was hard to see. I had the zoom on and everything. So much in your email to laugh about, I don't know where to start my comment trail.

Oh, crap! I gotta go...don't want to be late for my first appt. Wish me luck!

Love you so much!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I just go this e-mail today. We put away the radar that gave us the ability to receive e-mails about a day and a half before landing. SO they saved the ones they couldn't uplink in order to give to us when we got back.

You write such good notes!!

You are the best!! I love you.

15 years of gymnastics caught up with me today.

I turned my head to look at the mechanic after he handed me the bill, and now I've got the biggest crick in the world in my shoulder blade.

Whew! That'll wake you up!

I really lucked out. Only $500 (that's 2 helicopter lessons) of routine mx, really. 80,000 miles and I had never changed the spark plugs...whoops...heh heh.

Was stranded at Dance Class on Merritt Island yesterday, but used my newfound confidence in controlling mechanical thingys (thanks again to the helicopter) to keep the car running till I made it home.

It was a very coordinated maneuver, driving home. Since it stalled when the RPM dipped below 2000, I had to keep my foot on the gas, throw it in neutral, honk my horn, give people the finger...

Alright, I didn't have to do those last 2 things, but it sure made the drive home a lot more fun.

Honestly, though...these are the times when I miss my gigantic family. (and my smoke-jumper, whom I know would have come to my rescue)

Will have to control myself when I see you.. First urge will be to rip your clothes off, throw you on the ground and love the hell out of you.

Am anxious to get you alone...but honestly, love, I want you to totally and thoroughly enjoy your hero's homecoming.

So happy for you!!!!

I'll be here for you....

I'm feeling it, too, Babe!

AHA!!!! I see it!!!! And it took me 0.13 minutes to pick it out.

Ugh! I have to go someplace cold and snowy...arg!
I'm taking your picture with me. ...because I like to look at you...and I miss you...and you're hot...and I miss you...and to get through the cold and snowy and lonely night. Did I mention I miss you? sigh

I hear they're expecting more snow in Denver. Those poor people. Man, I hope I don't get stuck there.
Keep your fingers crossed.

And I haven't booked a hotel yet. Yikes! I better get on that!

And there was an aircraft intrusion into our airspace that caused a hold in our simulated launch. Bastard.
They stopped the clock at 2:40. Then I had to leave.

All this pent up excitement and no launch. You'd better watch out when I see you again!!!! GRRRRRR!!!!

MUAH Love you!!!!!!

Blue one. Still valid!

And there's 40 Euros in it. It's like finding money in the wash...only I can't spend it.
hmmmm.

Alright. Here are my potential conflicts that I'll start working asap:

1. DSP-23 is set to launch 1 Apr. If they go, no conflict. But, I'm 99.9% certain the launch will slip again. Good news is that it will probably be a significant slip. Should know more in the coming weeks. My feel is that this will not be a conflict.

2. My satellite folks are fixing to come to the cape on 25 April with a Trailblazer vehicle. Again, I feel this will most likely slip the right.

I've got the leave to do it.

The only remaining factor is that my boss is a jackass. That's not likely to change between now and then.

I'll start working to deconflict some things.

My chance of attending (barring unforeseen circumstances or miraculous feats of efficiency):

Definitely greater than 50%. I'd give it 65%.

Sounds like a great trip...hope I can go with you!

Was thinking about you today. Took one of our pictures to work to put on my desk. I like it there.

Makes the workday bearable.

Love you!
